Reports for 1980-19 also include the Annual report of the National Council on the Arts. The pace and scale of the exchange of cultural goods of all sorts&—paintings, furniture, even ladies' fans&—increased sharply in nineteenth-century Spain, and new institutions and practices for exhibiting as well as valorizing &"art&" were soon formed. Oscar V&ázquez maps this cultural landscape, tracing the connections between the growth of art markets and changing patterns of collecting. Unlike many earlier students of collecting, he focuses not upon questions of taste but rather upon the discursive and institutional frameworks that came to regulate art's economic and symbolic worth at all levels of Spanish society. Drawing upon sources that range from newspaper reviews to notarial documents, V&ázquez shows how collecting acquired the power to mediate debates over individual, regional, and national identity. His book also looks at the emergence of a new state apparatus for arts administration and situates these social and political changes in the broader European context. Inventing the Art Collection will be of interest to historians and sociologists of Spain and Europe, as well as art historians and cultural theorists. This two-part book on collections of paintings in Madrid is part of the series Documents for the History of Collecting, Spanish Inventories 1, which presents volumes of art historical information based on archival records. One hundred forty inventories of noble and middle-class collections of art in Madrid are accompanied by two essays describing the taste and cultural atmosphere of Madrid in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Outside Britain itself, the richest holdings of British art are found in American collections. This extraordinary presentation of some 85 works pays tribute to this strength of American collecting, while offering a fresh and engaging account of the history of painting in Britain from the sixteenth century to the present. The selection is drawn from collections from around the United States, both public and private, and includes spectacular pictures from the Yale Center for British Art and the Huntington Art Collections in California, the two leading collections of British art in America. Among the highlights are such masterpieces as Sir Anthony Van Dyck's portrait of Queen Henrietta Maria with her dwarf, Sir Jeffrey Hudson, William Hogarth's Beggar's Opera, Thomas Gainsborough's Blue Boy, Henry Fuseli's Nightmare, John Constable's Hadleigh Castle, J. M. W. Turner's Staffa, Fingal's Cave, and William Holman Hunt's Lady of Shalott. Following introductory essays by Malcolm Warner on anglophilia and art, and by Robyn Asleson on the history of collecting British art in the States, each painting is reproduced in colour, with a discussion of its artistic importance and the circumstances of its acquisition. During World War II, the Nazis plundered from occupied countries millions of items of incalculable value estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Spearheaded by Hermann Göring the looting program quickly created the largest private art collection in the world, exceeding the collections amassed by the Metropolitan in New York, the British Museum in London, the Louvre in Paris and the Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow. By the end of the war, the Nazis had stolen roughly one-fifth of the entire art treasures of the world. This book explores the formation of the Nazi art collection and the methods used by Göring and his party to strip occupied Europe of a large part of its artistic heritage. This book sets a new standard as a work of reference. It covers British and Irish art in public collections from the beginning of the sixteenth century to the end of the nineteenth, and it encompasses nearly 9,000 painters and 90,000 paintings in more than 1,700 separate collections. The book includes as well pictures that are now lost, some as a consequence of the Second World War and others because of de-accessioning, mostly from 1950 to about 1975 when Victorian art was out of fashion. By listing many tens of thousands of previously unpublished works, including around 13,000 which do not yet have any form of attribution, this book becomes a unique and indispensable work of reference, one that will transform the study of British and Irish painting. Catalog of an exhibition held Feb. 4-Apr. 25, 2005. The Modern Art collection of the Bayerische Staatsgemäldesammlungen in Munich is world renowned. Since 2002 the artistic milestones of the 20th and 21st century have been on display at the Pinakothek der Moderne. In addition to the largest body of works by Max Beckmann in Europe, there are exceptional paintings by Kandinsky, Kirchner and Picasso, important works by Bacon, Baselitz and Warhol, as well as current positions in painting and in new media. This publication introduces the artistic spectrum of the collection through an excellent choice of masterpieces. In concise essays, the curators dedicate themselves to representative movements, including the French Fauvists and Cubists, Italian Futurists, German Expressionists and the Bauhaus, as well as New Objectivity and Surrealism. Further chapters are concerned with artists in the periods surrounding World War I and under National Socialism. More recent works of art by Beuys, Judd, de Kooning and Polke are juxtaposed with contemporary works by Jeff Wall, video installations by Teresa Hubbard and Alexander Birchler. This volume also highlights the collection of photography.

Collection, Pizzuti Collection, Girls' Club, The Menil Collection, De la Cruz - Collection - Contemporary Art Space, The Margulies Collection at the Warehouse, Rubell Family, Collection / Contemporary Arts Foundation This book showcases the work of 33 painters who have chosen to remain in Russia and respond to life in a post-Communist society as unhindered members of the international artistic community. Their work expresses the new openness in Russian society Although there have been several catalogues of these paintings, including one by Bernhard Berenson in 1913, Carl Brandon Strehlke, Adjunct Curator of the Johnson Collection, has prepared the first complete scholarly examination. His discussion of such art historical questions as attribution, iconography, and patronage is complemented by the technical study of the paintings he conducted with Mark S. Tucker, the Museum's Vice Chairman of Conservation and Senior Conservator of Paintings. This is the first installment of a fully illustrated catalogue of the Academy's priceless collection of paintings and sculptures. 20 colour & 1370 b/w illustrations
